Vice-President Hart Has a Conference with Colonel Buford—The Society's Debt—Some Good Suggestions.

Colonel A. S. Buford, the newly-elected president of the Virginia State Agricultural and Mechanical Society, yesterday morning received a letter from Hon. John

After the war the surviving members formed the Washington Artillery Benevo-lent Association for the purpose of assisting their unfortunate and disabled com-rades and of erecting a monument to the memory of those killed in service. In August, 1875, the pressing need of a State military force led to a rearrangiation of the Article Programme of the Progra gust, 1875, the pressing need of a State mili-tery force led to a reorganization of the Ar-tillery battalion. It was an independent command until December, 1879, when it was mustered into the Louisiana National Guard. Three years later it withdrew, from the State service and has since re-mained an independent command.

Some years ago the battalion purchased the Southwestern Exposition building, a substantial brick structure fronting on St. Charles and Carondelet streets, between Girod and Julia. The upper floor forms one of the finest ball-rooms and as-sembly-halls in the city.

MR. MOSER'S COURSE ENDORSED. The Church Council Criticises Those Who Opposed Him.

The Dispatch of Jannary 20th published the fact that Rev. J. S. Moser, of the English Lutheran church, had submitted his resignation as pastor, to take effect March 31, 1891. In doing so Mr. Moser stated that his reasons for so doing were (1) the many discouragements with which he met and the utter hopelessness of the success of the Richmond mission; (2) financial considerations, (3) and knowledge of the fact that he could do more good in other and more inviting fields.

UPHELD BY THE COUNCIL. At a meeting of the church council Monday night the following resolutions were of co-operation on the part of many, as implied above.

4. Resolved, That in parting we unanimously express our good will toward our pastor, with the hearty wish and prayer that in his future work the field will be more congenial and more responsive to his recognized abilities as a preacher and worker.

5. Resolved, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be furnished Paster Moser, the city papers, and Lutheran publications.

A DIVIDED HOUSE. The principal cause that led to Mr. Moser's resignation is the fact that for years there have been two factions in the church. Instead of healing the breach has of late breadened.

broadened.

The dissatisfied element demonstrated its displeasure in a negative manner—that is, by refusing to attend or countenance the church in any manner. The two classes were nearly equal in number—about fifty each. The supporters of Mr. Moser claim that the other side are aided and abetted the control of the counter of the count by outsiders who want to break up the church, and they on their part insist that Mr. Moser is to some extent responsi-ble for the present state of affairs.

for Their Preservation.

A meeting of the Central Committee of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities was held at No. 107 east Grace street yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was small; barely a quorum was present.

It was decided by the committee to appropriate the sum of $500 to be sent to Mr. Lyon G. Tyler at Williamsburg for the repairing and preservation of the records of York county. These records are of great value and date back as far as the year 1633. Among the many interesting things recorded in these archives is the will of the father of Thomas Hansford, one of the colonists who figured prominently in Bacon's rebellion.

The records of the county were recently turned over to Mr. Tyler for safe-keeping, and the money appropriated by the association will be used in indexing and otherwise repairing the time-worn volumes.

HARD AT WORK.

To a Dispatch reporter who called at his office yesterday Colonel Buford said:

"I have been giving my attention to the necessary details for putting the society in proper shape for an independent and proper usefulness. This implies that the first thing to be done is to provide for the payment of the indebtedness of the society. I have to-day been in conference with Vice-President John L. Hurt in regard to this matter, and an early meeting of the Executive Committee to consider the different measures will be called shortly.

"I have to-day received a letter from Secretary P. M. Mr. Wilson makes some suggestions which may be useful in reorganizing our work here."

He is willing to do all the work necessary, and the fact that he does not live in Richmond will not be a drawback.
"It will be necessary, however, to have a secretary residing in this city so that he can act as custodian of the society's property."

MR. WHISON'S LETTER.

The following is the letter from Secretary P. M. Wilson, of the North Carolina Society, referred to by Colonel Buford:

WINSTON, N. C., January 30, 1891.

ciety will now prosper.

I have been the secretary of our State Society for several years, and naturally take much interest in this class of work. I will not annoy the beginning of your administration by suggestions, even though I know that you would give them more than due consideration; but I will put in the way of question what occurs to me as a direction your enterprise may take.

Could you make of a department of your annual fair an illustrative exhibit of Virginia (and probably North Carolina, West Virginia, and Rast Tennessee—upper South) physicial products of all kinds?

Could not an epitome of all the growing towns, railways, mines, enterprises, &c., &c., be collected in the ample halls of your building?

Would there be any jealousies of the capital on the parts of other towns as there would be amongst themselves? It seems to me not. It is not sectional. Then you would have good railroad facilities, and prospectors for all kinds of properties could get an introduction in this collection from all quarters to what was wasted. Every interest could have its literature and if it chose its representative.

rying companies make this a permanent feature and maintain it at profit?

The great crowds would come when the country people come with the annual fairs to compete for the prizes and have a holiday. That of course would not last a week.

Would not every interest be served in this way? The money outlay would be small for every town and company, and the advortisement that they would get can hardly be estimated.

I. A. Wilkinson, watchman at the Richmond Cedar-Works, just below the city, was seriously injured about 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a negro youth named Joseph Warren and his two sisters, Florence and Martha Warren.

Wilkinson discovered the boy stealing wood and aftempted to stop him, whereupon all three attacked him, and he was struck on the head by the boy with a brick and badly hurt. After this the pugilistic females and their brother all combined forces against the unfortunate man and he was terribly beaten.

Not content with thus having injured the watchman, who was at a decided disadvantage owing to the painful wound on his head, the three attempted to throw him in the river, and would undoubtedly have done this had not several of the operatives come to the rescue. The two women and their brother, who is about fifteen years of age, were arrested and imprisoned in the First police-station.

A walk through Rocketts will render it very evident to even the casual observer that it is only a question of time when the city will have to grapple with the problem of rendering a good deal of property in that section reclaimable by providing some safeguard against high water. In the low stretch just above where Rocketts street crosses Gillie's creek there are a number of untenanted houses that are going to run as a result of the floods.

The Codur-Works Company are preparing to erect a storehouse on their property in Fulton. The building will be three bundred feet long and sixty teet wide and three stories high. In an old-tashioned frame house in an ill-favored portion of west Porty-eighth street lives a woman eighty years old, with her daughter and the three children of the latter. The family of five occupy the second floor of a roosery, for which the rent is $14 month.

They are from Richmond, Va., and bear an honored southern name, which, at the earnest request of the woman, is withheld from publication.

The daughter of the elder woman is an invelid, dying, it is said, of starvation; not from absolute lack of food, but from the absence of proper nourishment and medicine. The youngest of the three children is but two years old; the oldest is twelve. This child earns $1 a week. It is the culy money that the family has to live upon. Their other needs are provided for by their poor neighbora.

The family was once wealthy and lived in Richmond on Franklin street, near the Park—the most aristocratic neighborhood in the southern capital. The war deprived the woman of her husband and much of her property. New all of her fortune has gone and she is left destitute in her old age.

The daughter was carefully educated at Rugers College. She was able to care for her mother and her three children by giving lessons in vocal and instrumental music. She is now paralyzed, partially demented, and unable to work.

The amount to be paid the proprietors of The Boston for their damage by water is $5,033.36. The statement that this house was allowed $20,000, though published after inquiry and in good faith, was erroneous. The part of the stock which was partially damaged was valued at nearly $20,000, and it was this that led to the confusion.

Messrs. Phillips & Stein's books are not yet in proper condition. As soon as they are written up the adjusters will act. The insurance men think that some of the goods in the basement may have been saved.

An officer in the Fire Department in speaking of the recent fire said that there was never a case where the necessity of a salvage corps was more clearly demonstrated than in the damage to The Boston's stock. The injury was entirely by water, and a few tarpaulins could have prevented it. As it was it cost the insurance companies over $5,000, just the amount needed to maintain a corps of six men for one year. To equip the corps will cost $7,500. This matter will be considered in a day of two by the Board of Underwriters.

Your report of the Dispatch:
Your report of the opening services at Venable-Street church errs in saying that at the conclusion of Dr. Burrows's sermon he preached a "brief dedicatory sermon." He preached only one sermon—and that a very remarkable one—and at its conclusion with great impressiveness asked the congregation to join with him in devoutly offering the house to Him in whose honor it had been erected. The element of surprise in this brief and beautiful ceremony was altogether pleasurable to pastor and people.

BEAUTIFUL BARTON HEIGHTS. Most Astractive and Growing Residen

A little over eighteen months ago Barton Heights was regarded by many as somewhat of an Utopian dream. To-day it is a beautiful reality. Not only that, but it must be evident to any one who will drive over it, as a Dispatch representative did yesterday, that its growth to its present proportions is but a suggestion of what its future is to be—but a beginning of the extension of Richmond all over that superb northern plateau of which the new suburban city's site is a part. tial to Richmond.

A meeting of the Ways and Means Committee of the Ladies' Hollywood Memorial Association was held Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. James B. Pace, the chairman.

Reports were submitted showing that the association cleared $800 net from the comedy "School," which was recently presented at the Academy by amateurs of this city.

More Than Ninety Years Old.

The oldest inmate of the Soldier's Home. Captain Josiah W. Hereford died, at that institution yesterday morning at 5 o'clock. Captain Hereford was a member of Company F, Forty-second Virginia infantry, and was one of the oldest soldiers in the death he was in his ninety-second year. Dr. Hoge will conduct the services at the grave at Hollywood this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Barton Heights is just a year and a half old and is the enterprise of Mr. James H. Barton, who has had most successful experience in building up similar places in the West—notable at Memphis and Little Barton, who has had not student was rapidly lengthening, and upon visiting the site of Barton Heights he saw no reason why it should not broaden also. There was to his practiced eve every natural condition to make it extend northward as well as eastward and westward. All that was necessary was to give it a start in that direction. Mr. Barton give it the start with the result that there are at Barton Heights to-day, completed and occupied, over fifty houses of varied and picturesque architecture; that five more are building, and that the demand for new houses is greater than at any time since the place was started.

Soloist for the Concert.

Director J. Emory Shaw, of the Richmond Philharmonic Association, left on the mid-day train yesterday for the North, where he will engage one or more soloists for the second concert of the series which will be given at the Academy on Tuesday evening the 10th instant. This concert promises to be equally as brilliant an affair as was the one given some weeks ago, at which Miss Marie Decca was the charming soloist.

A Youthful Criminal Placed in the Reformatory.

Frank Rosetti, the Italian boy, ten years of age, who was brought to Richmond from Norfolk Monday in charge of Detective Heppel, was placed in the reformatory yes-THE POPULATION.

The population of Barton Heights numbers about 200 persons, who constitute a charming social circle within themselves. Most of the citizens were formerly renters in Richmond, but are now owners or soon will be owners of the houses they occupy. Under the conditions of the contract those desiring to purchase homes make with Burlal of Mr. Stuart.

The high esteem in which Mr. John T. Stuart was held was evidenced by the large concourse of citizens assembled at his home in Buena Vista on Saturday evening, when his remains were removed to the waiting-room of the Shenandoah-Valley depot for transportation to Richmond.

Messrs. S. M. Donald and W. H. Shirey were appointed by the Real Estate Exchange as a second of the state Exchange as a second of the state in the conditions of the contract those desiring to purchase homes make with Mr. Barton the possibility of having any but a nice class of citizens is excluded. There is at the Heights a spacious hall in which there are one or two entertainments every week, and which is used for church services on Sunday, but the foundation of an Episcopal church has already been laid and a movement is on foot to erect a Baptist Change as a contract those desiring to purchase homes make with Mr. Barton the possibility of having any but a nice class of citizens is excluded. As the result of Mr. Barton's enterprise values have advanced all around Barton Heights in every direction, and other capitalists have seen the wisdom of investing in North-End property. The impulse he gave to development in that quarter opened the eyes of our people to the fact that there was wealth in the old fields on the northern plateau.

Barton Heights is an illustration of a waste place being made to biossom as a rose, but now that it is blossoming, and will continue to blossom in untoid luxuriance the only wonder is that others did not see what Mr. Barton saw—that is, that this waste place was cut out by nature for an extension of Richmond.

Barton Heights has pure air, splendid water, natural conditions for drainage, picturesque dwellings, is of the city without being in it, and has refined society. It is, in short, an ideal suburban addition to Richmond. Everything about the place is as neat as a new pin—as every citizen evens to via with his neighbor in Resonne

Richmond. Everything about the place is as neat as a new pin—as every citizen seems to vie with his neighbor in keeping his premises in good order. What with its nearness to the city and its increasing facilities for reaching our business centres, it is safe to predict that ere long Barton Heights and vicinity will be to Richmond what some of the most beautiful suburban towns of New York and Philadelphia are to those cities—that is, the resting-spots of their leading merchants.
